Quarterly Commentary as at June 30, 2017

The Canadian economy continued to strengthen in the second quarter of 2017. Yields had trended lower in April and May but surged in late June after the Bank of Canada appeared to shift away from a long-time stance emphasizing ultra-low rates.

Fund performance was boosted by allocations to the RBC Bond Fund, the Phillips, Hager & North Total Return Bond Fund and the RBC Global Corporate Bond Fund. The Phillips, Hager & North Short Term Bond & Mortgage Fund had a negative impact on performance.

The portfolio manager expects bond yields to rise slowly in the coming quarters, as the global economic expansion and fading threat of disinflation have led major central banks to consider tighter monetary policies. The Bank of Canada has already raised its benchmark rate once since the end of the reporting period. Investors expect the U.S. Federal Reserve to begin reducing the amount of bonds held on its balance sheet, an approach that the portfolio manager does not believe will disrupt fixed-income markets. Long-maturity yields are likely to remain range-bound in the near term and move higher as growth improves and inflation firms.
