Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2018

The Energy sector delivered robust returns in Q1. The oil price traded in a range in the US$60/barrel mark and looks to be strengthening into a multi-year high on geopolitical unrest in the Middle East coupled with trade-war rhetoric that resulted in a lower U.S. dollar. Natural gas prices trended below USD 2.85 per million British thermal units and continues to trend lower.

The Materials sector delivered weaker results in Q1. Trade-war concerns, which could potentially slow global growth and increased steel and copper inventories, contributed to this move. The Fund's relative performance versus the benchmark was positively impacted by overweighting exploration and production names, such as Enerplus Corp., and underweighting Peyto Exploration & Development Corp. and uranium developer, NexGen Energy Ltd. Offsetting some of this positive performance was our overweight of Spartan Energy Corp. and Raging River Exploration Inc. Overweights in base-metal developer, Ivanhoe Mines Ltd., and Arizona Mining Inc. and underweight in commodity-chemicals producers, ChemTrade Logistics Inc., contributed positively to Materials performance. Offsetting this performance on the negative side was the Fund's investment in Cascades, which makes containerboard for the consumer industry.

The portfolio manager believes that OPEC will continue to take steps to manage supply so that global inventories gradually return to normalized levels in the second half of 2018, even with incremental growth from U.S. onshore basins. Assuming global inventories continue to decline, the portfolio manager sees the potential for gains in oil prices and energy-equity prices during 2018. The portfolio manager's approach remains to invest in companies with high-quality assets, strong management and the ability to finance growth projects.
