

RBC Target 2030 Education Fund

Investment Objective

This fund is an asset allocation fund specifically designed to meet the changing needs of investors who are saving money for the purpose of funding a postsecondary education that commences around 2030. The fund gradually shifts its asset mix from an emphasis on equity funds, in its early years, to an emphasis on money market funds as its "target" date (2030) approaches. Over the life of the fund, its portfolio will shift from a focus on funds with growth potential to a focus on funds that will preserve capital.

Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

Global economic growth firmed, with a pickup in the Eurozone starting to factor into the expansion. In March, the U.S. Federal Reserve boosted its benchmark interest rate for the second time in three months, reflecting optimism about the expansion. However, longer-term U.S. bond yields fell late in the period on concern that President Trump might have trouble winning approval for his proposed economic reforms.

Major equity markets rose, led by Europe and emerging markets, amid optimism that economies around the world were gathering momentum. Equity funds that contributed positively to the Fund's performance included the RBC European Equity Fund, the RBC Emerging Markets Equity Fund and the RBC Asia-Pacific ex-Japan Equity

Fund.

Canadian, U.S. and U.K. bonds posted gains, while the improved outlook for the Eurozone resulted in losses for the region's government bonds. The RBC Bond Fund and the PH&N Total Return Bond Fund contributed positively to the portfolio's returns.

Leading economic indicators are at their best levels in several years, economic surprises have been overwhelmingly positive and profits continue to recover. As a result, risk assets have performed well, and long-term expected returns for stocks remain attractive. We expect bond yields to rise, resulting in low or potentially negative returns over the years ahead.
