Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2017

An overweight allocation to the Momentum and Earnings Growth factors contributed to returns for the quarter. The Shareholder Yield and Financial Strength factors also contributed to performance. An underweight allocation to the Size factor was the largest detractor from returns. Additionally, an overweight allocation to the Value factor hurt performance for the quarter.

Overall allocation effects slightly detracted from returns while security selection effects contributed to returns for the third quarter. Underweight allocations to Health Care and Real Estate and an overweight allocation to Information Technology contributed to returns while an overweight allocation to Consumer Discretionary and an underweight allocation to Energy detracted from returns. Security selection within Consumer Discretionary, Financials, Industrials, and Materials aided performance while security selection within Telecommunication Services detracted from performance.

It is the policy of the Fund to maintain currency hedges at all times in order to neutralize exchange-rate movements between the U.S. dollar and the Canadian dollar. This policy had a positive effect on returns during the period.

Based on our key themes, the Fund is very well positioned versus its benchmark and relative to the overall market. The Fund's companies have higher levels of return on capital, lower reliance on external financing, and trade at deep discounts across a number of valuation factors. They are also returning capital to shareholders at three times the rate of the benchmark. These combined advantages can only be delivered by a Fund which is distinct from the benchmark.

As the year progresses, we will continue to focus on our niche of the market: quality companies, often trading at out-of-favor prices, which are aggressively returning capital to equity shareholders through dividends and share repurchases. Given the weight of the evidence—across decades of testing and 15 years of live performance—we expect strong performance in the future.
