Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

In the previous quarter, cyclical sectors outperformed the market as investors focused on the potential pro-growth policies of the new administration. Furthermore, stocks with strong value characteristics outperformed stocks with superior growth traits, as investors were less inclined to pay for growth in the cyclical rally that commenced after the Brexit. In Q1, the return relationship between sectors was not as pronounced; however, we did see sectors like Health Care, Consumer Staples, and Utilities more than keep up with their cyclical counterparts.

Market performance going forward will depend on tangible evidence in the form of increased economic activity and better-than-expected corporate earnings. While some of the market's advance must be attributed to the anticipation of pro-growth policy action, the fundamentals are also doing their part to drive the market higher. Surveys of U.S. economic activity are at a six-year high and the new-orders and inventory components indicate that production should keep improving.

U.S. fixed income securities performed well in the quarter resulting in positive returns. U.S. investment grade, high yield and emerging market bonds performed the best outperforming higher quality government and conventional mortgage backed securities. Corporate and emerging market bonds performed well on the back of strong investor demand and stable to potentially improving economic growth.

The Fund is currently over weight U.S. investment grade and mortgaged backed securities relative to normal. Given the recent strength, we lowered our holdings of high yield and emerging market debt to a more normal weight. The Fund continues to favour credit assets relative to U.S. Government bonds to enhance the yield of the portfolio.
