Quarterly Commentary as at September 30, 2017

U.S. fixed income securities experienced positive returns in Q3, with corporate bonds performing better than government bonds. An improving economic environment, healthy balance sheets, low volatility and a generally accommodative monetary policy benefitted credit assets. U.S. investment grade, U.S. high yield and emerging market bonds outperformed U.S. Treasuries and conventional mortgage backed securities as credit spreads declined. Corporate and emerging market bonds also benefitted from strong investor demand.

The Fund's lower than normal weight in U.S. treasuries and above normal weight in U.S. investment grade bonds were the key contributors to performance in the fixed income portion of the Fund. Security selection and underweight positioning to the struggling Consumer Discretionary sector aided returns. Conversely, an overweight allocation and security selection in Consumer Staples was a detractor.

The shift towards a less accommodative monetary policy continues to play out as the U.S. Federal Reserve (Fed) is expected to reduce its balance sheet in October. With global interest rates near historical lows, the potential for higher rates may limit fixed-income returns in the future.

The Fund remains biased towards quality with an overweight exposure to U.S. investment grade and an underweight exposure to holdings of U.S. high yield and emerging market debt securities. The Fund increased its exposure to U.S. treasury bonds. Overall, the maturity profile of the Fund remains shorter relative to the benchmark as a way to preserve value in a rising rate environment.

Stocks continue to be supported by a global synchronized expansion and renewed corporate-profit growth around the world. With many equity markets at or near all-time highs stocks are not as cheap as they were when the cycle began, but remain somewhat attractive. Markets have benefited from rising earnings and price-to-earnings ratios through this bull market, but earnings rather than valuations may now be the force needed to propel the market higher.
