Quarterly Commentary as at March 31, 2017

Value, a primary selection factor, positively impacted performance adding 0.1% to return. An overweight to small- and mid-cap names detracted 0.2% from returns. The Fund had marginally lower exposure to the market—meaning the stocks in the portfolio have a lower beta. This lower exposure to the broad market detracted 0.1%. Finally, Momentum negatively impacted performance detracting -0.13% from return.

In the 1st quarter, Industrials were the largest detractor driven primarily by airlines holdings in American Airlines (-10%) and Delta Air (-7%) and United Continental (-4%). Consumer Staples were the next largest detractor, with negative contribution primarily from Norwegian Food Products companies Austevoll Seafood (-25.3%) and Norway Royal Salmon (-31.4%). Insurance Companies within Financials underperformed, with Swiss Re (-6.2%) being the largest detractor. There was a positive contribution from Energy companies, as not holding Exxon (-9.1%) helped performance. Our top contributing holding was Tupras, Turkey's only oil refiner, which saw strong returns of 22%.

From a country perspective, selection within the U.S. accounted for the total underperformance for the quarter. This underperformance was led by a zero weights in large technology companies like Apple, which was up 23.5% for the quarter, as well as a zero weight to Facebook which was up 22.4%, and Amazon which saw positive returns of 17%.

Our research of individual stock data leads us to believe that Value, Momentum, and quality are themes that are critically important to future outperformance. We consistently avoid sectors and industries that exhibit unfavorable characteristics and overweight areas of the market that are favorable in the ways we deem important. Given the portfolio's positioning relative to its benchmark, we believe the portfolio is well situated for the rest of 2017.
