Quarterly Commentary as at December 31, 2017

The U.S. stock market rose over the quarter, supported by a strong economic backdrop and solid earnings growth. The strong overall performance was driven by the continuation of the synchronized global economic expansion, still-accommodative global central bank policy and low market interest rates and inflation, which drove better-than-expected financial performance for most U.S. companies. Tax reform also helped lift investor sentiment late in the year. The expanding economy led the U.S. Federal Reserve (Fed) to raise interest rates during the period, bringing the total count of rate hikes to three in 2017.

The Fund outperformed its benchmark, the Russell 3000 Index, during the quarter. All of the Fund's strategies had a positive impact on performance, led by the two large-cap growth sleeves.

Global stock markets continue to be supported by the synchronized global expansion and better-than-expected corporate profit growth around the world, but the recent rally has pushed equities closer to fair value. While our base case is for U.S. stocks to rise modestly over the next year, there are several scenarios that could lead to declines, including an escalation of tensions with North Korea, a policy mistake by the Fed or protectionist trade moves by the Trump administration. Our indicators suggest that the odds of a recession remain fairly low but, with valuations at an eight-year high and the Fed intent on normalizing interest rates, the risks have increased and earnings growth remains key for return prospects.
