Quarterly Commentary as at June 30, 2018

Our tactical duration positioning was the primary driver of positive relative returns during the quarter. An overarching theme of central bank policy normalization drove bond yields higher through the first half of the quarter. We initiated a tactical long duration positioning during this time based on our view that yields rose too quickly in a relatively short time frame and would likely retract. This position proved to be advantageous when Italian political uncertainty came to the forefront in late May, coupled with an escalating trade war, which created increasing demand for the safety of bonds. We took this opportunity to solidify profits and trim back our duration position, ending the quarter modestly shorter than that of the benchmark.

We decreased the Fund's exposure to provincial bonds, ending the quarter slightly underweight. We continue to have a preference of government agency bonds, specifically Canada Housing Trust bonds, which are fully guaranteed by the federal government. We continue to have a cautious view on corporate bonds and have maintained a close-to-neutral position relative to the benchmark during the quarter, with a bias toward higher-quality, less-cyclical issuers. We would like to see better valuations (i.e., wider yield spreads) in these sectors to take more meaningful positions. In the meantime, we are content to be patient.

We also continued to engage in out-of-benchmark strategies in the Fund, including small positions in inflation-linked bonds, U.S. Treasuries and maple bonds (non-Canadian companies that issue bonds in Canada in Canadian dollars). These strategies help diversify the Fund in sectors where we see opportunities to outperform traditional Canadian bonds.
