

RBC Conservative Growth & Income Fund

Commentary as at June 30, 2021

A year into the pandemic, there was a sense that better times lay ahead as the first half of 2021 came to a close. By June, COVID-19 vaccines had reached at least half the population in many developed countries and were gaining traction in others, bolstering growth. The optimism was reflected in rising commodity prices and prompted concerns that inflation would accelerate. As a result, the U.S. Federal Reserve and the Bank of Canada began contemplating the potential need to tighten monetary policy.

Government-bond yields rose in most major developed markets, leading to declines in fixed-income indexes. Bond yields climbed as the global economy started to emerge from pandemic lockdowns. Government of Canada bonds delivered their worst first-half return since 1994, underperforming their U.S. counterparts, and the domestic 10-year federal bond was the second-worst performer among major markets.

Global equities continued their gains, with most major indexes reaching records. The moves extended the portfolio manager's model of global equity-market valuations to its highest level since before the 2008/2009 financial crisis. Canadian stocks outperformed U.S. and global equity indexes given that a significant portion of the domestic market is made up of companies that produce commodities.

As economies reopen, pent-up demand is being released. Strong growth, surging profits and investor confidence have boosted equities to records. The portfolio manager's models indicate that the acute valuation risk in the sovereign-bond market immediately after the pandemic's declaration was alleviated by the past year's rise in yields. In the shorter term, the portfolio manager sees low returns for sovereign bonds and believes an equity overweight is appropriate. That said, the portfolio manager recognizes that U.S. equity valuations are full and trimmed the equity overweight by 0.50 percentage point from last quarter, sourced from U.S. equities.

This has been provided by RBC Global Asset Management Inc. (RBC GAM) and is for informational purposes only. It is not intended to provide legal, accounting, tax, investment, financial or other advice and such information should not be relied upon for providing such advice. Information obtained from third parties is believed to be reliable but RBC GAM and its affiliates assume no responsibility for any errors or omissions or for any loss or damage suffered. RBC GAM reserves the right at any time and without notice to change, amend or cease publication of the information. Some of the statements herein may be considered forward-looking statements which are not guarantees of future performance. Forward-looking statements involve inherent risk and uncertainties. Do not to place undue reliance on these statements as a number of important factors could cause actual results or events to differ materially from those described. All opinions constitute our judgment as of the dates indicated, are subject to change without notice and are provided in good faith without legal responsibility.

Please consult your advisor and read the prospectus or Fund Facts document before investing. There may be commissions, trailing commissions, management fees and expenses associated with mutual fund investments. Mutual funds are not guaranteed or covered by the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation or by any other government deposit insurer. Mutual fund unit values change frequently. For money market funds, there can be no assurances that the fund will be able to maintain its net asset value per security at a constant amount or that the full amount of your investment in the fund will be returned to you. Past performance may not be repeated. RBC Funds, BlueBay Funds, PH&N Funds and RBC Corporate Class Funds are offered by RBC Global Asset Management Inc. and distributed through authorized dealers in Canada.