

RBC Emerging Markets ex-China Equity Fund

Commentary as at June 30, 2025

Financial market returns at the beginning of the year were dominated by U.S. President Donald Trump's threats to impose extremely high tariffs on major U.S. trade partners, leading to concern about a global trade war. U.S. trade policy led to a weaker U.S. dollar, and a falling dollar supported emerging-market equities in part because it reduces the cost of U.S.-dollar-denominated debt. A stock-market recovery in China, which accounts for about a third of the emerging-market stock benchmark, also helped support the performance of emerging-market equities. One of the most notable emerging-market developments in 2025 was the release of an artificial-intelligence ("AI") model introduced by China's DeepSeek. The release of this AI service, which might be competitive with U.S. AI leaders such as ChatGPT, boosted investor impressions of Chinese technology companies and emerging-market technology stocks in general.

Strong stock selection in the Financials and Information Technology sectors benefited the Fund's relative performance. A large overweight allocation to the Consumer Staples sector held back returns, while an underweight allocation to Information Technology had a positive impact.

Individual stocks that aided relative returns during the period included SK Hynix, B3 SA, MercadoLibre, HDFC Bank and Samsung Fire & Marine Insurance. Stocks that limited performance included Tata Consultancy Services, Raia Drogasil, Voltronic Power Technology, Dr. Reddy's Laboratories and Phoenix Mills.

The underperformance of emerging-market equities versus developed markets in recent years might be turning. One reason for the shift is that China's economic performance has improved in the past year after lagging coming out of the pandemic. The portfolio manager believes that Chinese equity gains can continue driven by a supportive regulatory environment, higher levels of factory utilization and a recovery in domestic consumption. Another significant negative for emerging-market equities was a decade of strength of the U.S. dollar, but a weakening greenback is likely to help power emerging markets.

This has been provided by RBC Global Asset Management Inc. (RBC GAM) and is for informational purposes, as of the date noted only. Discussion of any securities in this report is not a recommendation to buy or sell any specific security, and is subject to change. It is not intended to provide legal, accounting, tax, investment, financial or other advice and such information should not be relied upon for providing such advice. RBC GAM takes reasonable steps to provide up-to-date, accurate and reliable information, and believes the information to be so when provided. Past performance is no guarantee of future results. Interest rates, market conditions, tax rulings and other investment factors are subject to rapid change which may materially impact analysis that is included in this document. You should consult with your advisor before taking any action based upon the information contained in this document. All opinions constitute our judgment as of the dates indicated, are subject to change without notice and are provided in good faith without legal responsibility. Information obtained from third parties is believed to be reliable but RBC GAM and its affiliates assume no responsibility for any errors or omissions or for any loss or damage suffered. RBC GAM reserves the right at any time and without notice to change, amend or cease publication of the information.

Please consult your advisor and read the prospectus or Fund Facts document before investing. There may be commissions, trailing commissions, management fees and expenses associated with mutual fund investments. Mutual funds are not guaranteed or covered by the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation or by any other government deposit insurer. Mutual fund unit values change frequently. For money market funds, there can be no assurances that the fund will be able to maintain its net asset value per security at a constant amount or that the full amount of your investment in the fund will be returned to you. Past performance may not be repeated. RBC Funds, RBC Private Pools, RBC Alternative Funds and PH&N Funds are offered by RBC Global Asset Management Inc. (RBC GAM) and distributed through authorized dealers in Canada.

This document may contain forward-looking statements about a fund or general economic factors which are not guarantees of future performance. Forward-looking statements involve inherent risk and uncertainties, so it is possible that predictions, forecasts, projections and other forward-looking statements will not be achieved. We caution you not to place undue reliance on these statements as a number of important factors could cause actual events or results to differ materially from those expressed or implied in any forward-looking statement. All opinions in forward-looking statements are subject to change without notice and are provided in good faith but without legal responsibility.