Commentary as at June 30, 2019

Global equity markets rallied in the first half of 2019, rebounding from declines at the end of last year, as hopes for more accommodative central-bank policies offset uncertainty about the macroeconomic backdrop. Among the issues weighing on investors were the trade conflict between the U.S. and China and slowing global economic momentum.

All industry sectors gained during the period, with Information Technology and Industrials sectors recording particularly strong relative performance, while Health Care underperformed after Democratic presidential candidates argued for a system of U.S. universal health care. The Energy and Utilities sectors also lagged the broad stock market. The Fund's returns were bolstered by holdings in the Financials, Health Care and Consumer Staples sectors, while investments in the Information Technology sector had the most negative impact.

Danaher, the U.S. medical-equipment company, was the top contributor to relative returns, followed by Blackstone, the U.S. manager of real estate and other alternative assets. UnitedHealth, the U.S. provider of health-care programs, had a negative impact on returns given the health-care backdrop, as did the U.S. energy company EOG Resources.

Global equities ended the period near all-time highs, and the U.S. economic expansion, at more than 10 years, is now one of the longest on record. The length of the U.S. expansion has prompted debate about whether this period of growth will begin to taper. The Fund is structured to benefit from continued economic growth but also to weather a possible downturn.

Investors need to be mindful that the forces driving equity markets higher are also helping to foster greater economic inequality. This trend is a longer-term concern for the portfolio manager.
