Commentary as at June 30, 2019

The S&P 500 Index outperformed most other developed equity markets during the first half of 2019, and Canadian equities recorded strong returns during the period as measured by the S&P/TSX Composite Index. Commodity prices, including oil and gold, appreciated during the period, and the Canadian dollar strengthened versus the U.S. dollar.

During the period, overweight exposure to stocks exhibiting momentum aided returns, whereas overweight exposure to value stocks had a negative impact on returns. An underweight allocation to larger-capitalization stocks held back performance.

Sector allocation added to returns while stock selection was a negative overall. Overweight allocations to the Information Technology and Health Care sectors had the most negative impact on performance, while an overweight allocation to the Materials and Consumer Staples sectors added to returns. Security selection in the Materials and Information Technology sectors held back returns but was a positive for the Financials and Industrials sectors. Allocations to Air Canada and Kirkland Lake Gold were the largest individual contributors to performance. An allocation to Kohl's and the absence of Shopify were the stock-selection decisions that hurt returns the most.

The Fund has a 20% allocation to U.S. securities. It is the policy of the Fund to maintain currency hedges at all times in order to neutralize exchange-rate movements between the U.S. dollar and the Canadian dollar. This policy had a positive effect on returns during the period.

The sub-advisor increased allocations to the Consumer Staples, Health Care, and Materials sectors during the period and decreased allocations to the Energy and Information Technology sectors.
