Commentary as at June 30, 2019

U.S. equity markets rallied in the first half of 2019, largely as a result of optimism that the U.S. Federal Reserve would lower short-term interest rates, perhaps as early as July, and growing optimism that a trade agreement between the U.S. and China would be reached. The S&P 500 Index had faced heightened volatility during May as trade negotiations between the U.S. and China appeared to fall apart, but the volatility subsided after U.S. President Trump and Chinese President Xi indicated that they would work toward a resolution.

The best-performing sectors were Information Technology, Healthcare, and Financials. The worst-performing sectors were Materials, Real Estate, and Utilities.

Effective April 9, 2019, BlackRock Asset Management Canada Limited became the sub-advisor of the RBC U.S. Index Fund, replacing State Street Global Advisors, Ltd. On April 9, the Fund's benchmark was also changed to track the S&P 500 Total Return Index (CAD).
