Commentary as at June 30, 2019

Asian stock markets rebounded sharply during the six-month period from steep losses at the end of 2018, as equity valuations became more attractive and the economic backdrop improved. The U.S. Federal Reserve (the "Fed") refrained from making further rate hikes, allowing other central banks to loosen their own monetary policies. Meanwhile, financial markets benefited from somewhat increased optimism that the U.S. and China would resolve their trade dispute and a shift by China toward more monetary stimulus. On a regional basis, China and Australia outperformed the rest of the region while South Korea, Taiwan and Indonesia underperformed.

The Fund's returns were held back by a lack of relative exposure to the top-performing Energy, Materials and Real Estate sector. Among stocks that had a positive impact on returns was Ping An, China's biggest life insurer, and e-commerce-services provider Baozun, which were the Fund's largest positions at the end of the period. At the country level, the Fund's stock selection in China and an overweight allocation to India added contributed to returns, while the Fund's underweight allocation to Australia held back relative performance.

During the period, the Fund initiated a position in the Indian telecommunications provider Bharti Airtel. The sub-advisor believes that the company has attractive potential to enlarge its customer base and that the industry has the ability to raise prices over time.

The Fed's change in tone on the economy in recent months and signs that Sino-U.S. trade tensions will dissipate make for a somewhat more positive outlook for Asian financial markets. However, the sub-advisor expects further volatility beyond the near term as many trade issues are seemingly intractable.

The more favourable backdrop for Chinese corporate earnings and the addition of China-listed stocks to the global indexes will support the country's equity market, in the view of the sub-advisor.
