Commentary as at June 30, 2019

U.S. equities recovered in the first half of 2019 following significant global stock declines in late 2018. Stocks advanced for much of the period on expectations that the U.S. Federal Reserve would stimulate economic growth by lowering short-term interest rates on signs that the global economy was starting to lose momentum. Protectionist measures by the U.S. and China were another source of concern for investors, as a breakdown in trade talks between the countries stoked worries that global trade would be inhibited.

The Fund's performance was held back by stock selection and sector-allocation decisions. Unfavorable stock selection was concentrated in the Health Care, Consumer Discretionary and Materials sectors, offset partially by favourable stock selection in the Financials sector. In terms of sector allocation, the portfolio's underweight position in the relatively strong-performing Information Technology sector weighed on returns.

Individual stocks that had a negative impact on returns included Greenbrier Cos. and Stamps.com, while Compass Diversified, Patrick Industries and Columbus McKinnon contributed to returns.

Recent Developments

A lack of progress on resolving the U.S.-China trade conflict continues to be the primary near-term threat to U.S. economic growth, and the sub-advisor has therefore been making more investments that tend to be less sensitive to the pace of economic growth. The sub-advisor believes any significant progress on the trade front has the potential to significantly boost equity markets further, especially in the more economically sensitive sectors that would be supported by expectations of continued economic growth.
