Commentary as at June 30, 2019

Global equity markets rallied in the first half of 2019, rebounding from declines at the end of last year, as hopes for more accommodative central-bank policies offset uncertainty about the macroeconomic backdrop. Among the issues weighing on investors were the trade conflict between the U.S. and China and slowing global economic momentum.

All industry sectors gained during the period, with Information Technology, Industrials and Materials rebounding from declines in late 2018. The Energy and Utilities sectors lagged the broad stock market.

AB InBev, Belgian-listed global brewer, was the top contributor to relative returns, followed by AIA Group, the Hong Kong-listed provider of insurance and savings programs. Umicore, a Belgian speciality-metals company, and Oil Search, an Australian oil and gas company, held back returns the most.

Global equities ended the period near all-time highs, and the U.S. economic expansion, at more than 10 years, is now one of the longest on record. The length of the U.S. expansion has prompted debate about whether this period of growth will begin to taper. The Fund is structured to benefit from continued economic growth but also to weather a possible downturn.

Investors need to be mindful that the forces driving equity markets higher are also helping to foster greater economic inequality. This trend is a longer-term concern for the portfolio manager.
